CHAIRMAN'S COMMENTS

As we enter another winter of activity - never let it be said that our members hibernate - I would like to draw your attention to the programme of the new British Association for Local History (BALH) of which our Society is a member among 1300. This programme has come about partly through the ideas of members of the Programme and Development Sub-Committee, of which I am Chairman and partly through local initiatives. In other words, groups of people and local societies have sought the assistance of BALH to help run an event in some neglected area or some important
